Dear Joshua Lederberg,

same!

Thanks for your note. You're quite right that, in theory, there need not be a conflict between emphasis on prevention and high-technology rescues; but in practice there is a conflict, I think.

The main issue, for me, is that there is little scrutiny of the medical-research budget and less dialogue. So, in short, the faulty process is more troubling to me than the results.

With best wishes.

Yours,
Barb Bernstein
